Bylaws for Maryland Information Literacy Exchange (MILEX)

ARTICLE I - Name:

The Maryland Information Literacy Exchange (MILEX).

ARTICLE II - Mission:

MILEX members work together to develop better pedagogical, promotional and organizational models and materials for librarians and individuals interested in information literacy.

ARTICLE III - History:

In October 2002, librarians from across the University System of Maryland and Affiliated Institutions (USMAI) convened at the University of Maryland Baltimore County's Albin O. Kuhn Library & Gallery to discuss information literacy issues. The intent of the initial meeting focused on forming a collaborative effort within the USMAI to support information literacy efforts on individual campuses within the System. The University of Maryland Collaborative (UMC), as the group was initially known, focused its first efforts on obtaining grant funding to support the collaborative development of faculty workshops (and financial incentives for faculty to attend those workshops) designed to enhance faculty awareness of and provide faculty training on information literacy. In spring 2004, grant work was completed with submission of the proposal to the following prospective funding institutions: William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, SBC Foundation and AT&T. Ultimately all grant efforts were unsuccessful.

Following the grant funding work, the focus of the UMC changed. In fall 2005, the UMC members voted to change the name of the group to Maryland Information Literacy Exchange (MILEX) and subsequently opened membership to the wider community of Maryland academic libraries (university, college and community college). The hope was that broader participation in the group would encourage the collaborative development and sharing of resources focused on awareness of and instruction in academic integrity and information literacy.

Projects under consideration include the collaborative development of templates and course proposals for information literacy instruction as well as the development of resources for use in online course environments. One ongoing effort is involvement in local and regional conferences (such as Maryland Library Association) to highlight academic integrity issues and the information literacy activities of MILEX and its active member institutions. Additionally, MILEX offers small-scale conferences and workshops. The focus of these events is academic integrity and information literacy awareness and training.

As MILEX membership grew to include librarians from many institutions outside the USMAI system, the membership concluded that it was more appropriate for it to be an independent legal entity in order to directly manage funds. Accordingly, MILEX filed articles of incorporation with the state of Maryland on December 26, 2013 and also began the application process to be recognized as a tax exempt 501(c)3
